Bob Marr’s Autobiography

Bob Marrs is a native Kansan who grew up on a farm at the edge of the Flint Hills grasslands. He completed a Ph. D. in American Studies at Washington State University and has for the last 25 years been a teacher at Coe College. He also directs the Coe Writing Center and co-ordinates the college’s Writing-Across-the-Curriculum Program. In the last 15 years, over 125 of his students have had papers given as presentations at professional conferences or had articles or essays published in a dozen different publications. Although he teaches a variety of academic writing courses, his first love is working with students as they write about their experiences in the natural world.
