

Manchester Study Abroad

Holly Lyman

Before I moved to Manchester, I had no friends and no social life. I was unhappy with my situation. So I decided to take a chance and move across the ocean for six months. What followed changed my life forever.

Being from a small town, I never really experienced the city life. However, it was a culture shock that quickly turned into love.

I have always lived in the countryside with my family. I began doing things I never had before. Like going to concerts and events!

I even started learning about adult life. I learned to cook, how the transport system works, and even kept a plant!

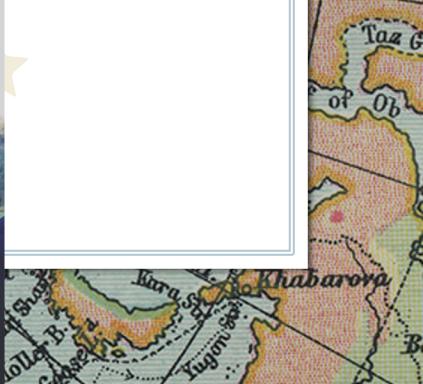

I even was able to travel to many places. I learned about new cultures, food, visited many museums, and spent lots of time in nature.

I went to London, Ireland, Amsterdam, and Spain!

I was taking classes I was passionate about and was taught by famous researchers in my field.

Case Study- Alleen Wuornos

- After many years, Alleen Wuornos returned to the prison she was held in during her trial. She was required to attend a court hearing.
- She got out of prison in 2003, after 11 years.
- After a lengthy RICO trial, prison, and court hearing, she was released from prison.
- She was released with both her mother and her mother's mother.
- She was released from prison.
- After her release, she began living off of the government, including food and a meal plan again.

I had amazing experiences, made so many new friends, and learned so much about myself.

For the first time ever, I was genuinely happy with my life!

If you are ever considering doing a study abroad, just do it! It will forever change your life. You will make so many memories and live a life of freedom and fun. I thank everyone who made this possible. I now have made a home for myself in Manchester, England. I am in talks to get my Doctorate's there as well!
